

GNBC, NACC teaming for ballet performances

"When we do a spring show, it's either brand-new – that we have to learn from step one – or it's work that we haven't done in so long that we have to review it and learn it.

"I've had to learn all three ballets to be able to direct the show. It's a lot more choreography to remember. The dancers are not familiar with the music, as much as they are for 'Nutcracker,' so that's another challenge – just getting used to all the differences. 'The Firebird,' in particular, is (an Igor) Stravinsky score, which is also very difficult to count, if you're at all familiar with Stravinsky's work.

"So, there are challenges, but we're getting through it."

The choreography won't be the only new thing on display.

"For the most part, it's all-new costumes for all three shows," Schnepf said. "We had a few things in stock, but most of it is all brand-new. We have a brand-new tutu for 'The Firebird'; all-new 'Concerto' costumes, as well.

"The sets are interesting, because we're at the Niagara Arts and Cultural Center stage, and there's only so much room right now for backdrops. You can pretty much put one up, but you'd have to leave it up. So, we have built a set for 'The Firebird.' Some are pieces from our 'Peter and the Wolf' set, some are brand-new. Our stage manager and board member, Mark Yerger, is really helping out with that, with very interesting lighting. We are somewhat limited with the lighting at the NACC, as well.

"It's looking really fantastic. I saw it last week. It's still in process, but it's looking really good.

"And for the other pieces, we're just leaving it nice and plain, very minimal. ... But for 'The Firebird' though, it's going to really transform that stage. I hope people are pleasantly surprised when they see that."

Schnepf said, "Since taking over as artistic director a couple of years ago, I've been trying to mix in some of the company repertoire with new pieces, so we're not putting on an evening of all-new work for us. This is our 57th season, and I just like bringing those pieces back in.

"But we also want to put on new work, and 'The Firebird' we chose because there were parts for all ages. We have parts that are for professional dancers, and we have parts for children like 6 and 7 years old and on up. So, it seemed to be an ideal choice to put on for the company in the spring just because it's so versatile. And it's a very popular ballet, too."

While the GNBC often stages shows at Niagara Falls High School, Schnepf said, "We like performing at the NACC."

"We're always really happy to be there," she added. "It's our home. We've been there for over 20 years as a dance company," with a studio on site.

"We like working with them," Schnepf said. "We do hope for more shows to come at the NACC."
