Separate codes enforce what can be parked on front lawns and how much space must exist between a driveway and property lines, he said.

But, he added, there's no direct code restricting the storage of larger trailers, campers, RVs and boats, if stored properly.

Adding code would be difficult, too, board members said.

"Besides the right-of-way, how do you tell people what they can do with their property," Councilman Charles Teixeira said.

Ultimately, it's a years-long problem some in the town face,

Supervisor Lee Wallace said. The situation often comes up in the summer, with visitors choosing to camp in campers on friendly property or boats being stored temporarily between trips onto the water.

Wallace, who is leaving the board at the end of the year, said there needs to be some kind of solution as they hope to protect the people just trying to leave their own homes.
